CUBS IN NINETEEN INNING GAME 4 TO 3

COLOR LINE BARRED MANY GREAT STARS

Pitching of Zabel Puts Cubs Through Long Siege With Brooklyn.—Final Run On An Error.

Chicago, June 18.—Batting like bull dogs for nineteen innings, the Cubs finally managed to emerge with the long end of a 4 to 3 score in a nineteen inning duel with the Brooklyn Dodgers.

The Cubs claimed first place as their own on the result. The Cubs established a lead of two to one in the first inning and hung on grimly until the seventh. A slip in the eighth almost broke the Cub's grip on the game, and another boot in the thirteenth almost split the game, but the Chicago nine came back with a grip that they strangled the game with until the fatal finish in the nineteenth.

Zabel took the slab in the first inning through an injury to his hand. Zabel pitched brilliant ball, holding the Dodgers to eight hits in the first nine innings. Two full time games. Not a run would have been scored against him but for the nearly fatal slip in the pinches.

When the teams went into the extra innings, Zabel and Zabel were going "great" and the Cubs were nearly helpless in the hands of the Brooklyn star. In the fifteenth inning Brooklyn put across one run and the game looked over. The Cubs halted the fans on their homeward journey when Sair boosted a home run over the fence, which considerably cheered Mr. Pfeffer. From then on the battling was fierce, brilliant defense was shown on both sides. Fischer started the nineteenth with a single. Schulte put the runner on second with a long fly. As Williams tracked down right, Cutsaw, second baseman, called the driver, but his spikes caught. He threw high, and Fischer scored all the way from second on the play. The game took three hours and a half to play.

Collins Shows Mack Up. Philadelphia, June 18.—Eddie Collins returned to Shibe Park here yesterday and showed the Philadelphia fans how to play ball. Largely because of the prowess of Collins, the Sox triumphed over the Athletics by the score of 3-0. Scott was on the mound for Chicago and during the game allowed but four hits. The remains of Mack's great team were helpless during the stages.

It's the old story. For Smith released Pitcher Fairbroth and Muskogee took him on. He then proceeded to pitch against his old team, allowed 13 but three hits and gave it one of the worst beatings of the year. If revenge was the motive in every game for some pitchers they would be unbeatable.

BOUT SHOWS GIBBONS IS NOT UNBEATABLE

Soldier Bartfield Gave the St. Paul Phantom a Trimming in Ten Rounds. Has Claim to Title. (By Barry Paris.)

New York, June 18.—A new face has bobbed up in the ranks, already densely populated, of aspirants to the crown of the late Stanley Ketchel, king of all middleweights. Soldier Bartfield, an ex-army battler, is the newest claimant to the title.

New York boxing critics were about ready to concede the honor to Mike Gibbons, the St. Paul "Phantom," when Bartfield hurled himself into the fray. Bartfield entered via the Gibbons route, which necessarily halted the awarding of any championship honors to the Minnesota star.

Bartfield licked Gibbons in a ten round set-to Decoration day, according to a majority of the ringside critics. There were some who believed a draw would have been a better verdict. But they were in the minority.

As far as New York is concerned, a triple tie now exists for the middleweight belt. Gibbons, Bartfield and Young Ahearn are held here to be the three best in their class. An elimination contest between these three will clear up the situation, it is believed. Harry Pollock is figuring on matching two of the three for his Brighton Beach open air pavilion for July 5. Just what two will be hooked up is uncertain. It likely will be Gibbons and Ahearn, however. That match will draw the biggest crowd, it is figured, and the "Kaiser" is what attracts the promoter. Bartfield is almost certain to get a crack at the winner of that match.

Feds Overlooked.

In all the excitement and bustle resulting from the big upsets in the American and National leagues this season, our old friends, the Federals, have been rather overlooked. It happens, too, that a neck and neck race is being staged in Jim Gilmore's league that couldn't be improved upon if pennant races were being made to order.

Six teams are all within a couple of games of the lead all of the time. A double-barreled win often burdens a club from fifth or sixth to the lead and vice versa. It is a race, too, that promises to last all the way down the stretch and the winner may not be declared until the last game is chalked up.

Bid For Honors.

Bill Phillips, Peys at Newark, who won the pennant at Indianapolis two years ago, is bidding for the honors again. In doing so, he has kept this club from galloping away from the field. Fielder Jones has whipped together a winning club at St. Louis and they are showing signs of giving the Mound City fans a shock by presenting them with a championship.

Joe Tinker's Chiefs look good, too, though weak hitting in streaks has kept them down. Rebel Oakes has had his Pittsburgh crew flitting with first place a good part of the time while Firebrand George Stovall has assembled a bunch of misfits that are up around the top, too, without any legal reason for being there.

Sport Snap Shots

MORRIS MILLER

The hardest luck pitcher in the world was found on June 5. He is Fitch Adams, a Chicago university prep boy, who pitched and lost a no-hit game to Morton High on that day. A walk, two errors and an infield out gave his opponents two runs.

The Los Angeles club has signed Pitcher Jasper, late of the Chicago White Sox.

Taylor made his debut in the Middle Texas league, succeeding Austin with a crowd of 2,000 fans on—more than saw all the games played in Austin up to the time it dropped out of the league.

Of all the nerve that a player has ever displayed, none has equaled Ben "Kauf," who is suing the Giants for $5,000, a bonus he was to have been paid when he signed with the Giants. As this transaction was not permitted by the powers that be in baseball, Kauf, of course, remained with the Peds, yet he wants the New York club to pay him the $5,000.

Hughie Jennings of the Detroit

Tigers has about decided that he won't need the three young college twirlers who have been signed for him. The trio are Koob of Kalamazoo Normal; Regan, the Cornell wizard, and Ferguson, of Michigan.

Hughie says he can't see Ferguson and he's already offered Regan to the Yanks. "If I would turn all these college wonders loose in the American league they would make the race too one-sided for us," says Jennings, with a broad grin. "They never strike out less than 18 to 20 men in a game and that would rob the contests of all interest. Besides, Cobb, Crawford, Veatch, Bush and the rest of the players would catch cold standing around with nothing to do all afternoon, while the catchers would be overworked receiving third strikes."

The recent death of Jacob Ruppert will be a blow to harness racing, for the millionaire brewer was an enthusiastic horseman. He owned the Hudson River Stock Farm and Driving Park at Poughkeepsie and some splendid campaigners driven by Tommy Murphy represented his farm. Indeed many of the best horses campaigned by the leading money-winning driver of the Grand Circuit were the property of the veteran horseman.

Brooklyn fans, as well as Wilbert Robinson, manager of the Dodgers, are much worried over the form displayed this season by Nap Rucker, formerly one of the best, if not the star, southpaws in the National League. In his four games this season he has been taken out of the box each contest before it was finished. Is only victory was in an exhibition game, when he pitched the Dodgers to a victory over the Yankees, the score being 5 to 0, although Nap twirled only six innings.

John McGraw has announced that he is through trying to reform Larry McLean. No less than ten other managers have come to this conclusion during McLean's career, and patience of none lasted much longer than that of McGraw. It seems impossible for McLean to live up to rules. He does not take the game seriously. McGraw will let him out in a few days and it would not be at all surprising if this would end McLean's career for ball clubs are picking up players who violate the training rules and are seldom in contention to do themselves justice. Mc-

Lean has been suspended and sent home to New York.

The veteran Jim Connor, for many years with the Providence Grays and at one time manager of that team, has been signed to manage the Pawtucket team in the Colonial league. New Bedford will this year have two teams in the league, since the promoters could not get a park in Brockton in which to play. One of the New Bedford teams will be known as the Tiptops and the other as the Whales.

THE MOTOR IN WAR.

Our ancestors in their early wars of the dim centuries before the Christian era, first marched to war with spear and shield, sword and bowmen. Then came the days of the chariots, the mounted footmen with long lances and the knights in armor. The nations who fought in the great wars of the past, fought in the same way. The chariot, the mounted footman, the knight in armor, the nation who fought in the great wars of the past, fought in the same way. The chariot, the mounted footman, the knight in armor, the nation who fought in the great wars of the past, fought in the same way.

How different today is the method of fighting. Troops are transported by steam, by electricity, by motor cars and are rushed from one battle front to another, resting and recuperating from one engagement to be prepared for a second grueling contest. The automobile has taken the place of the chariot of the early days. The motor car has been converted into a means of delivering food and ammunition at the battle lines. Into armoured cars, the staff officers and their headquarters to another, and even as a means of transport for troops being quickly moved from one battle front to another.

Germany has taken the lead in this work. Their war motors were carefully arranged for years ago. Subsidies were granted to firms that used huge vans of sufficient power for army purposes that could be quickly converted into war vehicles. They transport their troops as needed, they carry their wounded to the rear, to the hospital, and their tireless engines purr constantly as they bring munitions of war to the firing line.

The allies were not so well equipped. They took the motors as they found them. They turned buses into this or that use. They took huge trucks and used them as they could, and then they went out and bought more in the open market. The factories of the United States have furnished its quota of vans and specially built buses and more are now in process of construction for like everything else that is being utilized in this war of ages, the motor wears out, become useless and are cast aside after a few months of service.

That the problem of a supply of motor conveyances is considered vital to the fighting end of the terrible struggle is evidenced by an English writer in the London Observer, who makes the following comment on the entrance of Italy into the struggle as one of the allies, and writes:

"Italy has had ten months in which to prepare for her entry into this war. As far as her motor resources are concerned she has made the fullest use of them. It must be had in mind that only half a dozen countries in Europe out an important figure in the motor industry, since Switzerland has never assumed any really prominent part in the story of the movement. Of the six countries in question, four constitute the allies—Britain, France, Belgium and Italy—and two our enemies—Germany and Austria."

"The Italian motor industry is at least the fourth most important in Europe, amounting to more than the now ruined Belgian one did and that of our enemy Austria does."

"Italy's advent to industrialism is indeed largely associated with the part she has played in automobilism, since this has been one of the prime means of her establishing numerous engineering factories on large scales. She was not as early on the scene as France, ourselves or Germany."

"Her first big and still most important automobile effort is the Fiat enterprise, which had its origin about a dozen years ago in the effort of a small group of Italian sportsmen who, between them, put up the money for the quite modest beginnings of what has for some years been a world-wide business."

"In the past we have had motor booms in this country, but it is doubtful if even any one part of these islands has ever been swept by the sort of motor fever which spread over Italy, resulting in an inflation of share values and subsequent slumps that can only be likened to the madness of the rubber boom and its consequences in this country some years ago."

"All those, however, are matters of the past that today may be regarded as no more than the teething troubles of new industries. What is much more important and durable is the fact that for the most part Italy has had to manufacture motors for export in that, as far as the pleasure car movement is concerned at any rate, there was comparatively small scope for the industry had it been confined to supplying home demand.

"It is the business of selling Italian cars in this country, in South America and in the United States that has enabled the industry to assume the important proportions that have been attained today and which constitute so invaluable an asset to our ally in the struggle for the cause of humanity in which she is now engaged."

"As showing what intelligent governments can do to create industries and therefore riches in countries, one may recall incidentally that in the beginnings of the motor movements Italy was able to produce very little of the raw material needed for the manufacture of cars; therefore her government issued special regulations whereby it was possible for Italy to import those necessary materials free of duty provided they issued from the country within a certain number of months in the guise of manufactured articles, such as chassis."

"When you have in mind besides the fact that in the beginning labor was vastly more cheap in Italy than in rival motor manufacturing countries and that to assist factories in getting going the government built special roads and brought railways to them and lightened their financial obligations in every form, you will appreciate that there have been solid grounds for the mushroom rate of growth of Italy's motor industry, which is, of course, protected by tariff."

"Her motor factories today are capable of turning out more than is necessary to make good the wastage of war; they can besides expand Italy's equipment of heavy transport, armoured cars, ambulance and kindred vehicles, airship and aeroplane engines, motorboats and submarines to any extent that our ally may desire. Though she entered the motor industry comparatively late, Italy was one of the first countries to produce satisfactory submarine motors. There is any amount of scope for the effective use of motor transport in the operations now proceeding on the Italian-Austrian frontier."

The horse has become reconciled to the automobile, but some auto drivers do not fully understand the law of the land relative to their rights and the rights of pedestrians. Also the city ordinances relative to turning square corners is not observed in all cases, although it is a precaution in the interests of safety. In this perhaps both pedestrians and auto drivers are to blame, but as long as the law remains on the city ordinances it should be obeyed.

Next in line comes the opening of the playgrounds. For a few days the children will be glad to know nothing of school, but shortly the value of these play centers will be demonstrated to the satisfaction of the parents who are glad for a safe and safe place for their young folks to enjoy healthful exercise during the summer months.

Graduation periods are nearly over. Just a few more days and the nervous strain on the nation will be past and the Nineteen Fifteen fledglings will all have been successfully launched, and the country can breathe easier when all this latent talent is set at the disposal of the nation to use as it sees fit.

The campaign to secure signatures to make Janesville a better lighted city is about ready to be launched. Consider the question well before refusing to sign the petition to the mayor and council when it is presented to you.

The man who has a dog and has not paid a license had best come forward. The police claim that this year no guilty owners will escape. Let us see how they make good their threats.

A woman diets for fat, a man for his stomach or some other organ.

A majority of the "tightwads" are recruited from the ranks of those who have managed to accumulate about twenty thousand dollars, or who eventually will manage to do so.

The rule in our town is that the man who comes to us recommended as a "booster" and a live wire must pay cash in advance.

A candidate's promises to the people are not worth much. But they are just as valuable as the people's promises to a candidate.

Any joke is funny if the Bishop of your church chances to tell it.

When a man becomes a factor in politics two things are indicated. One of them is that he stays by his friends and the other is that his word is good.

If the thing a man wants to do is right he goes and does it. If it is wrong he consults an attorney.

By the time a man finds out that he doesn't amount to anything, and never will, he is too old to care anything about it.

Lelia Constance Featheringham, who is 47 years old and unmarried, always says to a bride: "I hope you will be as happy as I have been."

In our town recently a quiet, efficient man ran for office against a "good mixer." It will please all those who have been annoyed by "good mixers" to know that the quiet, efficient man was elected by a majority of 2,700 votes.

Do Your Children Brush Their Teeth Night and Morning?

If not, you are neglecting them and your duty and preparing sorrow for them. Teach your children about health.

A clean tooth does not decay. If you teach your children to brush their teeth every morning and every night you will save them trouble and suffering and increase their efficiency throughout their whole lives.

Bad teeth cause sickness, chronic dyspepsia. They lead to other diseases.

They cause suffering, they are unsightly. They interfere with a girl's chances of marrying well.

NEW TICKET STAND FOR FAIR GROUNDS

Board Will Erect Structure on Milwaukee Avenue—Track in Prime Condition—Advertising Campaign Starts.

Fair Dates Are Aug. 10, 11, 12, 13, 14.

Members of the Janesville fair board held their regular weekly meeting last evening. Numerous matters came up for consideration.

Expectations were that it would be possible today to lay out the Milwaukee avenue entrance grounds for the new ticket office, which the board will have erected for the fair in the fall, but the rain caused an abandonment of all arrangements. The board will request bids from local contractors for the new ticket office.

Matters pertaining to the racing matinee which will be held on the afternoon of July 5, in celebration of independence, were considered, but nothing definite was decided.

Work of cleaning and repairing the grounds and buildings will be under way shortly. A considerable amount of whitewashing will also be undertaken to add to the attractiveness and neatness of the grounds and buildings.

The past week has seen quite a rush from hundreds of interested parties for premium lists. The value of the catalogue as a directory for the farmer has been heralded far and wide by early receivers of the publication. The supply is diminishing rapidly.

The rains of the past month have tended to harden down the tracks and place them in prime condition for speed trials. While the intervals between the shows have only in a few cases offered opportunity to the drivers to try out their ponies, the tracks showed up lightning fast and should be in the best condition by early fall.

There are a large number of horses at the stables at the present time and new arrivals are putting in their appearance weekly.

The country-wide advertising of the fair will start within the next week or ten days. It is proposed to have the posters on the boards by the fourth of July. Every town and village within a radius of twenty-five miles of Janesville will be covered.

MARGARET M'CORD WINS IN SPELLING

Girl From District No. 1, Lima and Koshkonong, Captures First Place.

Friday With Standing of 95.

Out of the twenty-nine who wrote in the spelling contest yesterday afternoon at the high school building, in connection with the Rock County school graduation exercises, Miss Margaret M'Cord of District No. 1, Lima and Koshkonong, captured 95 percent.

Miss M'Cord, who is a native of Lima, was the only girl in the county to score a perfect record. She was followed by Miss Ethel Davis of District No. 5, Rock, who scored a close second with 94 percent.

Each contestant wrote on one hundred words the words being pronounced by Principal F. J. Lovett of the Rock County Training school. Fifteen of the twenty towns in the county were represented, and twenty-seven of the 168 districts represented.

SINNISSIPPI CLUB GETS HIGH RANKING

Local Golfers Tie for Fourteenth Place Out of Sixty-one Clubs Competing for Tom Morris Cup.

Sinissippi club golfers were gratified to learn that their standing in the Tom Morris trophy event, in which sixteen clubs were entered, was a victory scored by the Los Angeles club and gave it permanent possession of the big shield. The previous victories were in 1912 and 1913.

The Los Angeles Country club was the winner, turning in a score of 25 down to par, the Virginia Country club of Long Beach, Cal., being second. This was the third victory scored by the Los Angeles club and gave it permanent possession of the big shield. The previous victories were in 1912 and 1913.

VERA CAMPBELL WEDS

MADISON INSTRUCTOR AT BELOIT ON FRIDAY

One of the prettiest weddings of the season occurred at Beloit, Friday, at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Campbell, on St. Lawrence avenue, when Miss Vera Campbell, daughter of the bride, was married to Myron Chester West, by the Rev. Martin R. Brandt of New Haven, Connecticut, a classmate of the groom.

The wedding ceremony was played by Miss Jane Morgan of Beloit at the piano and Miss Ada Fiske of Milwaukee at the violin. After the ceremony a delicious wedding luncheon consisting of three courses was served at the home of the bride.

After an extended wedding trip to the western coast, Mr. and Mrs. West will make their home in Madison, where the groom is holding position as head of the mathematical department at the University of Wisconsin. The bride's mother will be remembered by Janesville people as Miss Jennie Read, formerly of the town of La Prairie.

Boost for baseball next Sunday.

SIDE TALKS

THE CHARITY JAG.

Charity, like mercy, is supposed to be twice blessed; to bless him that gives and him that takes. And doubtless true charity does. But there is also a false charity, that, instead of blessing, intoxicates him that gives. What it does to him that takes, depends on the character of the person. I am referring to the charity that is given not for love of the object, but for love of one's self, for joy in the sense of power, for pride in the sense of superiority.

I met a woman the other day who had been on what I call a charity jag. Her tongue was loosed. She had been giving her washerwoman a pile of old clothes that she had discarded in her spring cleaning. She had just returned from taking them to what and so forth, and she was fairly intoxicated with a sense of her own generosity and wisdom and power. She couldn't help chattering to me about it and showing her self-satisfaction any more than a man who has had enough to loosen his tongue can help saying things that he wouldn't say in his perfectly controlled moments.

After Removing Anything of Value.

She had been having a most pleasurable kind of excitement, and having it very cheaply, since the clothes were old things that she probably would never have used again anyway and from which she had carefully removed anything really good in the way of lace, trimmings, fancy buttons, etc.

Getting One's Money's Worth.

I suppose this kind of charity has its place in the scheme of things. I suppose there are people who will not give unless they can get their money's worth in a sense of power and superiority; in short, in a charity jag. They absolutely require that stimulus.

And then, too, I am afraid there are a good many poor people who encourage this intemperance by being willing to sell this intoxicant in return for material benefits conferred. I started to call this charity a "charity from the name." They know that these benefactors like to see them crawl in from the street for a certain amount of alms. Poor creatures, we call them paper-patched and we blame them. What right have we? Who knows what extremes have driven them to sell their bright light for a mess of pottage? Who knows but that we would have lost our self-respect much sooner?

The charity jag is as dangerous and insidious as any drug habit. If you would safeguard yourself against it try these three specifics—give more generously, love more fully and be more reticent about your charities.

spoons plain gelatin; dissolve in a little water and add to sugar; when cold add one cup lemon juice and one can grated pineapple or any kind of fruit. This makes one gallon.

TO REMOVE GREASE ON RUGS OR CLOTHING.

This recipe for cleaning rugs will be found inexpensive and easy to prepare, and can be depended upon to remove all dirt and grease spots. One bar naphtha soap (or enough to make lather), one-half teaspoon table salt, one-half teaspoon baking soda, one-half teaspoon powdered alum. At the drug store get in a bottle; eight ounces ammonia, one-half ounce ether, one-half ounce chloroform.

Keep this last tightly corked and when ready to use add three table-spoons from bottle to two gallons of the hot soap water. Shake thoroughly and USE THE FOAM. Apply with a stiff brush. Wipe with clean cloth. Rugs should be cleaned on floor and simply left to dry.

This recipe is sufficient for cleaning two 9x12 rugs. If any remains, let stand overnight and add to the clean jelly two quarts hot water, and use for woodwork, floors, etc. Try this for grease spots on clothing, suits, portieres, etc. It works like magic.

TRANSPARENT HATS IS LATEST EFFECT

Hats Won't Cover a Multitude of Sins in Hairdressing Under Fashionable New Dress.

By Margaret Mason.

There's nothing secretive in fashion. That's really quite plain to be seen. She now is so very transparent. She's even exposing her hair. Hats that are made of illusion. For frocks of the same she is keen. In lingerie blouses and mantles. All made of illusion she's seen. And so in a paradox manner. Results of all chance are better. Because she's so wrapped in illusion. No illusions about her are left.

New York, June 18.—Hats won't cover a multitude of sins in the hairdressing line any more. You've got to have a good "do" on your hair now. adays because the very smartest chapeaux can easily be seen through. There are two popular forms of transparent hats—this one is a simple straight flat brim composed of two layers of malle stretched smoothly over the wire frame—the other has the brim composed of a wide, floppy ruffle of the malle, double thickness, with occasional wires radiating from the crown to keep the ruffle from going altogether.

While transparent crowns of the same malle are still very good, the latest effect is to have a velvet crown in the midst of the gauzy brim. The open face hats are most stunning in black with a wide, black band, all black with the only adornment, but all white hats or delicate pinks and blues are also most fetching with sheer veils. These hats are most summer frocks are all of that let me tell you. Organdie so thin and exquisite of weave and texture that Queen Mab herself might well be pleased to don it as the material de luxe for summer frocks and blouses. In all delicate tints, either plain or strewn with Pompadour garlands, it is the quintessence of feminine loveliness. The all white organdie is ideal for lingerie gowns and blouses particularly as by a new triumph of the weavers' art it now washes like a dream and rises as beautiful and supreme from the wash as Venus from the waves.

For the wide Quaker collars and cuffs, the many fichus and kerchiefs that now adorn the Victorian toilettes organdie has no adequate rival. It has only one defect. It is so very sheer that it leaves absolutely nothing to the imagination. This is a defect, however, that pertains to but certain classes of women.

Indeed the admonition to "keep your shirt on" might easily be offered by a short sighted person to an organdied blouse. The more natural conjecture would be, however, that she didn't have any on to keep. These organdie blouses doubtless rely on their revealing powers for sufficient charm for they almost altogether eschew lace or other embellishment and save for a few tiny handkerchiefs or embroidery are strictly plain and tailor made.

There's nothing peek-a-boo about these 1915 models; rather they are dubbed the long-and-lingering-look-waists. Of course, stockings have to put their foot in it and get in the non-concealing class, also, by wearing a slit or two in the most nonchalant manner with open work cloths and open work strips and other open work motifs too numerous to enumerate. As it is only natural for stockings to go to extremes since that's what they are made for, their swift transition from these open work gauze effects for dress and dance occasions to cashmere and all wool creations for sport wear is not to be wondered at. Rather than wear woolen hosiery, my lady Dainty yesterday would rather have suffered a thousand ills, but today she flaunts them in the face of the multitude of the links, the tennis court or at the steering wheel. They come in all the bright plain colors or white and colored stripes and checks. The black and white pin check models are perhaps the most popular to match up the many sport coats and suits of shepherd plaid.

Can it be that she will jump as nimbly from her chiffon chemise into woolen lingerie?

Prayer.

If father gets the notion in his head that he is going to accomplish everything by prayer it makes it hard for mother, who has to get up early each morning in order that the children may have clothes and grub. I ain't knocking on prayer, mind you, but I don't pray for things that you can get without it.—Atchison County (Kan.) Mail.

Glimpses of Married Life

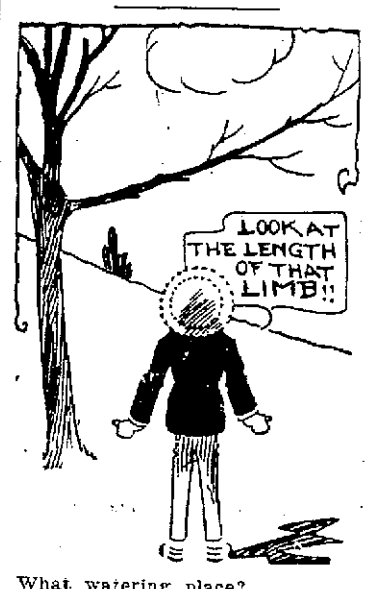

BY MRS. EVA LEONARD

"Hello!" called Nell from the kitchen as she heard Dick open the front door. "Come here, dear." When Dick stuck his head in the kitchen door he asked, "Where's Mary?" "She's fired her," announced Nell grimly. "Oh, dear, you have not rested enough to do the work alone. What happened?" There was regret in Dick's voice. "Just wait till you hear what happened before you say anything. That girl was Mrs. Ellison's spy. Nell stood watching the effect of this bomb with set lips.

With the suddenness of the revelation. "You remember the night I thought I heard someone leaving the dining room door? We were talking of the doctor and Olive then, I remember. How dull we were not to have caught on sooner, mused Dick. "She knows my home address; knows that I plan to go east in December; that the doctor is going to a medical convention at the same time, and will help me with the baby, and every crumb of information she picked up, you may be sure Mrs. Ellison knows. "Please hand me the small vegetable dish from the china closet. No, not that one, it's too large," said Dick from behind the cupboard door. "There must be one; a small oval one." "Is this it?" he asked, reaching a dish from the top shelf. "Yes, what a queer place for it. Here, let me wipe it off; it looks dusty," and Nell rubbed it vigorously.

best china, too. "That's about what you might expect of a girl who would read private correspondence. I'm glad you shipped her," said Dick sympathetically. "We'll get along some way. The little girl to wash dishes and help with the baby worked pretty well and when china was broken at least it was not hidden, and my letters were safe, which was something. I dread to clean the pantry. No telling what I'll find," Nell was cleaning up the wreckage as she talked. "Come on now, before dinner gets cold. You carry the chop plate," she added. "We can talk all the secrets we want to tonight and not be afraid of eavesdroppers. That's a comfort," said Dick as they sat down.

For many years Piano manufacturers have tried to reduce the selling expense to pianos. The old way of paying solicitors, the question of the best advertised piano and one in which the purchasers are given the greatest possible value. This is the age of co-operation and the manufacturers correctly believe that the best way to market and introduce their product is to spend the advertising money in making special offers for the people rather than employing world-famous demonstrators at fabulous expenses, and making the people pay for such methods by asking a heavily inflated price for the piano.

Heart and Home Problems

Letters May Be Addressed To Mrs. Thompson, in Care of The Gazette.

Drs. Mrs. Thompson: When I was younger my mother never allowed me to go with boys, but now that I am old enough (eighteen years old last March) none of them care to go with me. Several of them are very interested in me at school when I meet them out, but they never ask me to go anywhere with them. I don't think I am unattractive. I am considered rather pretty. I have a good figure, I am interested in athletics and sports of all kinds, and I am not of the "soft" variety.

I am telling you all this in the hope that you may be able to tell me what is wrong. I am not sure that I want a boy around all the time or cannot be happy without one. The other girls are asked to dances and such things and not. Whenever one of my friends has a party and asks certain boys to bring certain girls, anyone asked seems perfectly willing to bring me, but no one asks if I can go. Perhaps you are shy and don't enter into the spirit of things as much as the girls who have boy friends. Don't for a minute think that boys are not going to like you. Enter into conversation with them and draw them out on subjects that particularly interest them. Sports and war for instance. When the boys take you home from parties ask them to call some time. Give parties of your own and invite several girls and boys without having the girls bring their own company. Be very careful of your dress. Boys like simplicity and good lines in clothes rather than fussiness. If you wear chic things you are almost sure to attract them.

Household Hint

THINGS WORTH KNOWING. To Clean White Shoes—Make thin paste of lumpy starch and lukewarm water. Apply generously to soiled white shoes and let dry; brush off starch and soil will come with it. "Change" Handkerchiefs—One often wonders what one can do with the money for church collection or car fare. This dainty handkerchief solves the problem. A large Irish crocheted rose is overhanded two-thirds around one corner of the handkerchief, and a tiny crocheted button and loops made to fasten this miniature pocket for change. The edge of the handkerchief is finished with Irish picot or any edge desired.

THE TABLE. Chicken Pie—Clean and cut up a chicken, boil until tender, remove bones. Line buttered baking dish with rich biscuit dough and put in half of the chicken; season with butter, pepper and salt. Add a layer of hard-boiled eggs cut in slices and the rest of the chicken. A few potato balls, boiled until nearly done, may be added. Add enough of the water in which chicken was boiled to fill the dish, cover with a biscuit crust which has a large hole in the center for the steam to escape, brush with beaten white of an egg and bake half an hour.

Celery Salad—Take three bunches celery, chop fine in chopping bowl, sprinkle over it salt and a little pepper, then beat up one egg in sauce pan, add half teaspoon vinegar, two tablespoons sugar and one tablespoon salad dressing; stir it all together, when it comes to a boil put about five minutes, stirring constantly; then put it into a dish and add an egg boiled hard, which cut in slices and lay over the top; garnish the edges with tops of the celery. It is best when cold.

"Adjustable" Cake—One cup sugar, two-thirds cup butter, three eggs, two and one-half cups flour, half teaspoon salt, two teaspoons baking powder, one cup milk, one-fourth cup cocoa, one cup nut meats. By leaving out the nuts it is a plain chocolate cake. Or the cocoa can be omitted and a nut cake is the result. By omitting both cocoa and nuts, and favoring both cake and frosting with lemon, it is a delicious lemon cake. Or, baked in a large pan, it makes a nice white loaf cake.

Frozen Oranges—Frozen oranges for dessert at any season of the year are delicious. Remove peel and slice

CHAPTER XV.

In the Burglar-Proof.

A week and a day after the opening of new vistas at Miss Grierson's "evening" Griswold-Raymer's interest in the Widow Holcomb having paved the way took a favorable opportunity of announcing his intention of leaving Mereside. It figured as a grateful disappointment to him—one of the many she was constantly giving him—that Margery placed no obstacles in the way of the intention. On the contrary, she approved the plan.

"I know how you feel," she said, nodding complete comprehension. "You want to have a place that you can call your own; a place where you can go and come as you please and settle down to work. You are going to work, aren't you?—on the book, I mean?"

Griswold replaced in its proper niche the volume he had been reading. It was Adam Smith's "Wealth of Nations," and he had been wondering by what ironical chance it had found a place in the banker's library.

"Yes; that is what I mean to do," he returned. "But it will have to be done in such scraps and parings of time as I can save from some bread-and-butter occupation. One must eat to live, you know."

She was sitting on the arm of one of the big library lounging-chairs and looking up at him with a smile that was suspiciously innocent and child-like.

"You mean that you will have to work for your living?" she asked.

"Exactly."

"What were you thinking of doing?"

"I don't know," he confessed.

Again he surprised the lurking smile in the velvet eyes, but this time it was half-mischievous.

"We have a college here in Wahaska, and you might get a place on the faculty," she suggested, adding: "As an instructor in philosophy, for example."

"Philosophy? that is the one thing in the world that I know least about."

"Oh, but I do mean it, honestly," she averred. "You are a philosopher, really and truly, and I can prove it."

"Open That Box on the Table, Please."

Do you feel equal to another little drive downtown?"

"Being a philosopher, I ought to be equal to anything," he postulated; and he went upstairs to get a street coat and his hat.

She had disappeared when he came down again, and he went out to sit on the sun-warmed veranda while he waited. He had already forgotten what the drive had said about the object of the drive—the proving of the philosophic charge against him—and was looking forward with keenly pleasurable anticipations to another outing with her, the second for that day. It had come to this, now; to admitting frankly the charm which he was still calling sensuous, and which, in the moments of insight recurring, as often as they can be borne to the imaginative, and the couchsafed now and then even to the ravishing, he was still disposed to his companion was saying to the young woman custodian, and he stood aside and admired the workmanship of the complicated time-locks while the two entered the electric-lighted safety deposit vault and jointly opened one of the multitude of small safes. When Miss Grierson came out, she was carrying a small, spanned document box under her arm, and her eyes were shining with a soft light that was new to the man who was waiting in the corridor. "Come with me to one of the coupon rooms," she said, and then to the custodian: "You needn't stay; I'll ring when we want to be let out."

"Number three-forty-five-A, please."

Griswold followed in mild bewilderment when she turned aside to one of the little mahogany-lined cells set apart for the use of the safe-holders, saw her press the button which switched the lights on, and mechanically obeyed her signal to close the door. When their complete privacy was assured, she put the jannaped box on the tiny table and motioned him to one of the two chairs.

"Do you know why I have brought you here?" she asked, when he was sitting within arm's-reach of the small black box.

"How should I?" he said. "You take me where you please, and when you please, and I ask no questions. I am too well content to be with you to care very much about the whys and wherefores."

"Oh, how nicely you say it!" she commended, with the frank little laugh which he had come to know and to seek to provoke. She was standing against the opposite cell wall with her shoulders squared and her hands behind her: the pose, whether intentional or natural, was dramatically perfect and altogether bewitching. "I was born to be your fairy godmother, I think," she went on joyously. "Tell me; when you bought your ticket to Wahaska that night in St. Louis, were you meaning to come here to me work?"

"No," he admitted; "I had money, then."

"What became of it?"

"I don't know. I suppose it was stolen from me on the train. It was in a package in one of my suitcases; and Doctor Farnham said—"

"I know; also he told you that we didn't find any money?"

"Yes; he told me that, too. We agreed that somebody must have gone through the grips on the train."

"So you just let the money go?"

"So I just let it go."

She was laughing again and the be-dazzling eyes were dancing with delight.

"I told you I was going to prove that you are a philosopher!" she exclaimed. "Sour old Diogenes himself couldn't have been more superbly indifferent to the goods the gods provide. Open that box on the table, please."

He did it half-absently; at the first sight of the brown-paper packet within the electric bulb suspended over the table seemed to grow black and the mahogany walls of the tiny room to spin dizzily. Then, with a click that he fancied he could hear, the buzzing mental machinery stopped and reversed itself. A cold sweat, clammy and sickening, started out on him when he realized that the reversal had made him once again the crafty, cornered criminal, ready to fight or fly—or to slay, if a life stood in the way of escape. Without knowing what he did, he closed the box and got upon his feet, eying her with a growing ferocity that he could neither banish nor control.

"I see; you were a little beforehand with the doctor," he said, and he strove to say it naturally; to keep the malignant devil that was whispering in his ear from dictating the tone as well as the words.

"I was, indeed; several days beforehand," she boasted, still joyously exultant.

"You—you opened the package?" he went on, once more pushing the importunate devil aside.

"Naturally. How else would I have known that it was worth looking up?"

Her coolness astounded him. If she knew the whole truth—and the demon at his ear was assuring him that she must know it—she must also know that she was confronting a great peril; the peril of one who voluntarily shuts himself into a trap with the fear-maddened wild thing for which the trap was baited and set. He was steadying himself with a hand on the table when he said: "Well, you opened the package; what did you find out?"

"What did I find out?" He heard her half-hesitant repetition of his query, and for one flitting instant he made sure that he saw the fear of death in the wide-open eyes that were lifted to his. But the next instant the eyes were laughing at him, and she was going on confidently. "Of course, as soon as I untied the string I saw it was money—a lot of money; and you can imagine that I tied it up again, quickly, and didn't lose any more time than I could help in putting it away in the safest place I could think of. Every day since you began to get well, I've been expecting you to say something about it; but as long as you wouldn't, I wouldn't."

Slowly the blood came back into the sinner channels, and the whispering demon at his ear grew less articulate. He took the necessary forward step and stood before her. And his answer was no answer at all.

"Miss Grierson—Margery—are you telling me the truth?—all of it?" he demanded, seeking to pinion the soul which lay beyond the deepest depth of the limpid eyes.

Her laugh was as cheerful as a bird song.

"Telling you the truth? How could you suspect me of such a thing! No, my good friend; no woman ever tells a man the whole truth when she can help it. I didn't find your money, and I didn't lock it up in poppa's vault; I am merely playing a part in a deep and diabolical plot to—"

Griswold forgot that he was her poor beneficiary; forgot that she had taken him in as her guest; forgot, in the mad joy of the reactionary moment, everything that he should have remembered—saw nothing, thought of nothing save the flushed face with its glorious eyes and tempting lips: the eyes and lips of the daughter of men.

She broke away from him hotly after he had taken the flushed face between his hands and kissed her; broke away to drop into the chair at the other side of the table, hiding the flashing eyes and the burning cheeks and the quivering lips in the crook of a round arm which made room for itself on the narrow table by pushing the jannaped money-box off the opposite edge.

It was the normal Griswold who picked up the box and put it on the other chair, gravely and methodically. Then he stood before her again with his back to the wall, waiting for what every gentle drop of blood in his veins was telling him he richly deserved. His punishment was long in coming; so long that when he made sure she was crying, he began to invite it.

"Say it," he suggested gently, "you needn't spare me at all. The only excuse I could offer would only make the offense still greater."

She looked up quickly and the dark eyes were swimming. But whether the tears were of anger or only of outraged generosity he could not tell.

"Then there was an excuse?" she flashed up at him.

"No," he denied, as one who finds the second thought the worthier; "there was no excuse."

She had found a flimsy bit of lace-bordered linen at her belt and was furtively wiping her lips with it.

"I thought perhaps you might be able to—to invent one of some sort," she said, and her tone was as colorless as the gray skies of an autumn night-fall. And then, with a childlike appeal in the wonderful eyes: "I think you will have to help me a little—out of your broader experience, you know. What ought I to do?"

His reply came hot from the refining fire of self-abasement.

"You should write me down as one who wasn't worthy of your loving-kindness and compassion, Miss Grierson. Then you should call the custodian and turn me out."

"But afterward," she persisted pathetically. "There must be an afterward."

"I am leaving Mereside this evening," he reminded her. "It will be for you to say whether its doors shall ever open to me again."

She took the thin safety-deposit key from her glove and laid it on the table.

Dinner Stories

Dinner Stories JUNE 18

An ignorant negro had been persuaded to buy a thermometer by a glib-tongued salesman, and a few days later he came back with it, complaining that it didn't give satisfaction.

"What's the matter with it?" asked the clerk.

"Ah, dunno, but it ain't made no difference round mah place. Some days de house am too cold an' other days it's too hot."

At a Scottish watering place one summer, MacPherson was found stretched in a contented mood on the sands, puffing his old pipe.

"Come on, Mac," said his companion, who had just come from town, "let's go for a sail."

"Na, na," replied MacPherson, slowly shaking his head. "I hae had a guid dinner at the cost of three pence and shapence, an' I'm takin' no risks."

"Did you ever hear such silly rot as that line of Tennyson's: 'Half a league, half a league, half a league, onward?'"

"What is there silly about it?"

"Why, anybody knows that not more than half the league can be going onward at any given time. For every game one tea mwin's some other team has got to lose one."

A Sunday school teacher had been telling her class of little boys about crowns of glory and heavenly rewards for good people.

"Now, tell me, she said, at the close of the lesson, 'who will get the biggest crown?'"

There was silence for a minute or two, then a bright little chap piped out:

"Him wot's got th' biggest head."

Carefully, with a smile upon her lips, a cruel little smile at thought of the hurt she was giving in return for the one just received, five minutes later, with her grip in hand containing all the tawdry, cheap reminders of the life she was leaving, she pinned her sweetheart's note to the little cushion on her dresser, then stole softly down the stairs and out into the night. Nor did she deign to give one glance back at the prison house.

"Where, sir?" queried the driver again.

"Reverend Black's parsonage—opposite end of town, you know, on Carson street."

White smiled happily to himself as, lost in the pictures painted by the flames in the library grate, he visualized the happy hours that had been his since that night in the comfortable, little parsonage when Rita Deane became Mrs. James White.

A man worth while, a young man whose shoulders had not bowed beneath the weight of handling great wealth unloaded upon him immediately he quit college, a man submerged in business, at the age of thirty, he found the happiness which his nature had craved when he soon wearied of the laborious efforts at winning pleasure in the set in which his riches had placed him.

He could not exactly analyze the sensations of delight it had given him to please her. And she was so easily pleased.

And never an emergency but Mrs. James White met it firmly and controlled it. The Rita Deane of Mary-Janes and shabby attire had assumed leadership of the youngest and gayest set of the city.

Arm in arm they moved down the long, winding gravel path to the garage. Rita was prattling over the details of a novel entertainment she purposed giving the following week.

His eyes wandered dreamily over the level lawn, the beautiful garden, the gorgeous flowers, then halted, and a tender, almost longing expression deepened them, as he watched his chauffeur playing with his baby. He glanced furtively at Rita, almost fiercely trying to find some reflection in her eyes of the light dwelling in that of Mary, the chauffeur's wife, as she took the child from her husband, who stood at attention, listening to his mistress' instructions.

And then Billie crowed. That is, it might be called a crow.

For just at that moment the whole world seemed spinning about before Jim White's bewildered eyes. He rather suspected that the fat, tiny finger clamped about the one he had timorously thrust appealingly toward the arbitrary infant might have had something to do with this astonishing state of affairs. As from a long ways off he heard the gurgling rise into a penetrating wail. And then the laugh of Mary.

"He wants to go to you, Mr. White."

FIRST "WHO PAYS?"
PICTURE PLEASURES

Large Audiences Are Pleased With First of a Series of Pictures at Myers Theatre.

The gripping question of all time, "Who Pays?" was answered one way, which was shown at Myers Theatre yesterday, matinee and evening. The stars featured in this picture by the Pathe company were excellently fitted to portray the parts for which they were cast.

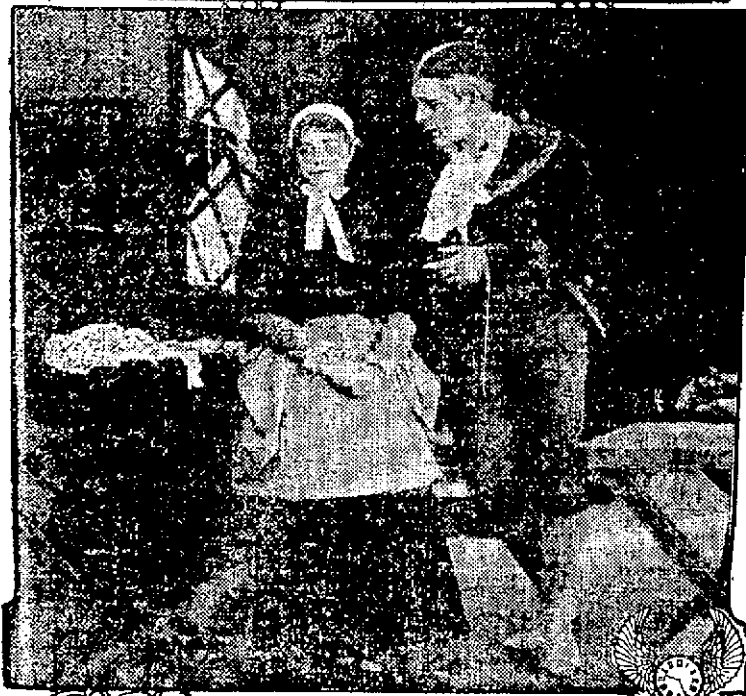

In addition to the above, a very funny Pathe comedy, being the adventures of Colonel Heeza Liar as a Ghost Breaker was shown and very much enjoyed.

The Pathe Illustrated News featured a number of recent happenings of world interest and were worth seeing.

AT MYERS THEATRE.

In the "Three of Us," in which Mabel Taliaferro stars and which is to be seen at the Myers Theatre tonight, there are a number of strong mining scenes. For these B. A. Rolfe, Photo Plays, Inc., took Miss Taliaferro and the company to a little mining camp in the far west, the exact location of which has not been disclosed. There

LILLIAN GISH AND WALLACE REID IN "ENOCH ARDEN"
FOUR-PART MUTUAL MASTERPIECE PRODUCED BY MAJESTIC

A severe critic of pictures, in speaking of this production which is shown at the Majestic tonight, says: "In these days of cheap, slapstick comedy, when producers' ambitions seem to be realized when the actors throw soft pies into each others' faces, it is truly a delight to see a beautiful story handled in as masterly a way as this."

TO DESTROY MILLIONS OF STREET CAR TICKETS
PRINTED WITH RECIPES

(BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.)

Venice, June 18.—Several million street car tickets which Vienna city authorities had printed with various recipes for war-cookery dishes to replace meats and expensive foods, are to be destroyed. People who tried these recipes came back with angry protests to the effect that practically all the new dishes required the use of eggs, butter and milk, making them just as expensive as the meats which they were designed to replace.

MADISON ICEHOUSES

DESTROYED BY FIRE

City Faces Ice Shortage As a Result of Loss—25,000 Tons in Building.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]
Madison, Wis., June 18.—Watched by thousands of spectators, fire destroyed the Conklin icehouses on the shore of Lake Mendota, a short distance from the executive mansion and five blocks from the capitol, yesterday afternoon, with a loss of $25,000, fully insured. The immense structure was nearly a block long. Twenty-five thousand tons of ice filled the building. Much of it can probably be saved. At best, however, the city's ice supply this summer will be seriously depleted. This is one of two companies which supply the city's cooling needs.

Adjoining residences were saved with difficulty. The president of the company, James Conklin, is in the Mayo brothers' hospital at Rochester, Minn., where he underwent an operation a few days ago. He has not been notified of the loss.

OVER ELEVEN THOUSAND BRITISH WOMEN ENLIST IN WOMAN POLICE FORCE

London, June 18.—It is announced that over 11,000 women have been rolled in Great Britain under the scheme authorized by the Home Secretary for organizing women police.

At Brighton, Winchester, and other places, women police have been in evidence for some months, but they have been the result of local effort rather than of a general nation-wide movement. The Home office authorization was intended to give official recognition to the scheme and encourage its general adoption.

The women police are intended particularly to take care of young women and children in their respective districts. The chief recruiting efforts are being put forward in the vicinity of the great military camps, such as Colchester, Cheshamford, Canterbury, Dover, Winchester and Exeter.

The policewomen are given a course of special physical training and wear a distinctive uniform, with an armband created to give official recognition to the scheme and encourage its general adoption.
